Katherine Cramer is the director of the Morgridge Center for Public Service and a professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Her work focuses on the way people in the United States make sense of politics and their place in it. She is known for her innovative approach to the study of public opinion, in which she invites herself into the conversations of groups of people to listen to the way they understand public affairs. Her work has appeared in the Washington Post, New York Times, Vox.com, USA Today, and the Guardian. She has spoken with people around the globe to share her insights on public opinion and prides herself on speaking frequently with groups of people who want to achieve justice and democracy for all.
