THE CELIA M. HOWARD FELLOWSHIP

Learn what it is like to work in a public policy think-tank researching issues related to government reform or a range of other subjects like water issues, child welfare, economic development. Fellows may work with the Institute staff bringing speakers to campus or holding events throughout Illinois. Fellows may also help develop public opinion poll questions, poll response analysis and press releases. You can also work on topics of your interest that align with the mission of the Institute.

Applicants can be from any major. Female, second-year MPA program students intending to work in government or public policy are encouraged to apply. Applicants must be U.S. citizens, domiciled in Illinois for more than two-years (at the time of application), have received a bachelor’s degree, and have an overall “B” grade point average or better.

Celia M. Howard (1876-1950) received a scholarship to Harvard Law School, but was denied the opportunity to attend the then all-male university because she was a woman. She graduated from Chicago’s John Marshall Law School and is believed to be the first woman to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court. She was the national leader of the Illinois Federation of Business and Professional Women’s Club, which established the Celia M. Howard Fellowship Fund.
